Need an Article? SFX Helps You

Want to find out whether an article you want is online? You may have noticed the SFX button in citations in many of the article databases available through the Libraries' Web site. SFX will soon be called Find It.

Find It tells you all the ways a journal or a particular article is available at Hopkins. When you click the Find It button in an article citation, you'll see a window like the one at right. Find It indicates online availability of an article in databases like PsycINFO or in e-journal collections like Project Muse and JSTOR. If no online full text is indicated, be sure to click the JHU Libraries Catalog link—we may subscribe to the journal in print and/or online.

Feeling Exposed?

As you read this, do you know where your wallet, purse, backpack, or laptop is? Remember that the library is a public place and unfortunately people do steal things. Don't leave your stuff unattended!

Adios, RAUL

RAUL, the proxy server that lets you connect to licensed library resources from off-campus, is being retired at the end of the semester. Now's the time to install the JHSecure VPN (Virtual Private Network) software on your off-campus computer.
